

Wasting and Killing Time

Contract bridge and jigsaw puzzles this year have swept the country and the popular pastime right now is to spend an entire evening in piecing a picture together. Perhaps, the most popular is a fox-hunt scene or an old English cottage, cut into over 300 intricate pieces. A picture is sure to contain plenty of sky all the same color. Then there are many delicate tinted and shaded until the average person doesn't know who the final picture will be a male team pulling out stumps, or a young couple walking down lover's lane in apple blossom time.

Regardless of the work—and it is work—people are enjoying this sport. Indeed it is fascinating work. Unless you are an artist or have seen the picture completed, you must proceed by the trial and error system. It is mostly a matter of mathematics could figure exactly many different combinations to try in 300 pieces and it would run into the millions, or perhaps a billion. The average time required to put a puzzle together is placed at three hours, but if you complete it in that time you must have the aid of your wife, mother-in-law, all the children and a few neighbors.

The puzzle in its present form is for amusement only. Something rather interesting to do while waiting for prosperity to return, stocks to go up. It fills this purpose admirably. Prosperity will surely be here by the time some of these intricate pieces get placed together to form the right picture.

But do you remember about 25 years ago when these puzzles were given to children at Christmas? True, there weren't so many pieces in this day. The most popular puzzle was a map of the United States. The pieces were of a respectable size and if one dropped on the floor the dog didn't eat it for an animal cracker. The children put these puzzles together at home and then in school pleasantly surprised the teacher by knowing the location of the various states. It could be put together in about five minutes by any apt child.

The game of solitaire once upon a time filled in many leisure hours for a number of people. The jigsaw puzzle has now taken its place. What will be the next amusement which will replace the puzzle? Will the time come again when the famous crossword puzzle will be resurrected and hailed as a new thing by a coming generation? Will dominoes once again hold sway after the dishes are washed in the evening. How about croquet on the lawn for a nice quiet afternoon?

Some woman who taxed her ingenuity to keep her family in homespun clothing has a counterpart in the woman of today. We recently saw how the women made hooked rugs. This splendid work for a man, the women claimed, and in fact they said there were a number of men who actually enjoyed doing it. It seems that you take a spike, bend it properly, file a hook in the end and then you are ready to transform old burlap sacks, flannel underwear, Aunt Gertrude's crazy quilt, the old linen duster, Uncle Simon's overcoat into a hooked rug or a chair seat that will be a joy to behold, also very practical as a landing flap when you jump out of bed on a cold morning. Really clever designs were worked out by the women under the direction of the men. These rugs did not cost a cent in money. The frame holding grandma's picture could be used to shape the rug, the spike used for the hook was easily obtained, and the materials used came from the attic. It is indeed surprising what fine rugs can be made from such material.

RESOLVED TO HAVE BETTER TIMES

Not only for our peace of mind but for uplift of our efficiency we should not let the bad of this period of depression blind us to the good. We should not think so much about the unemployment that is "carrying on" under the stress. We may derive courage—and we need it—from the millions that are "plugging away" at their various jobs, are carrying a living and perhaps a little to contribute to those not doing so.

If we would give credit where credit is due, now is an opportune time for doing it. Old-fashioned "grit" is yet with the multitude. Faith to go with it is in evidence. Our sense of fellowship is being stimulated, broadened. Our appreciation of actual values is being educated. Life is seen as more than a hectic rush for pleasure, indeed, observing ones are revising their ideas respecting what is real pleasure and what is but a glittering imitation of it. Most of us have not been reduced to the extremity of fighting for scraps of food, and fortunate are those who are grateful for that account. Perhaps too, we have become more receptive of Paul's wisdom to prove all things and hold fast to that which is good.

The proving is going on all about us, indeed, a degree in the woman of today. The woman of today is not only a housewife, but she is a business woman. The former perceives that he has other obligations than those of accumulating money, that there are other kinds of capital; the caretaker is learning that capital and other things are to be taken care of. The essentials are commanding our attention to their due importance.

By these means we should be advised that the rover in a storm or because it does not altogether meet with his approval, nor neglect his task because he thinks better ears might be devised. There is ample evidence that many already are thus advised, that they are pulling strong and steadily to make port, are making it. The winds of words are yet blowing quite a gale, but the will to work is finding ways to do it. Our food production is ample. Nature has been kind in that respect. The future holds out promise and we are setting ourselves to make the most of it. Self-reliance, desire to improve on that which we have, have not deserted us. The daily news reports more and more of us finding employment, more and more of us steadily making port, are making it. We really are coming through the ordeal in better shape for the future than we were when absorbed in speculation and the latest model of automobile. We are going to have better times because we are working to have them and are seriously working for them.

Very recently I have read that an adult person can live for months without physical detriment, on one bushel of wheat. This staple product is now selling at fifty cents a bushel, it is said. Wheat and milk, it has been stated, are our only perfect foods. These alone contain all the elements required by the human body. If this be true, and one was sufficiently heroic, he could probably manage to exist until passing from this scene would be desirable. However, when I recall the "grounding" tests of the last year, the suggestion of a purely wheat diet holds no allurements for me.

DO YOU STILL HAVE YOUR WHITTILING CLUB?

Here a Stolen Poem Sent by G. A. C., Laramie, Wyoming

A Blacksmith shop and country store,
I see no whittlers any more.
I mean me think around these parts,
That whittlin' one of those lost arts,
That rise and flourish, wane and pass,
Like temperin' brooms—de Voice class,
I guess 'twas lost about the time
That whittlin' got to be a crime.

When I say whittlin' I don't mean
A scarpin' wire or spark plug clean,
Nor makin' whittlin' in the Spring;
I mean the whittlin' that was done
In sober earnest—not for fun.
They whittled not for what was wrought
But rather as an aid to thought.

To figure close—to fix a trade
When some decision must be made—
A good jack-knife and piece of pine
And whittlin' staving from it fine
Just soothed and smoothed and made things straight.

And helped the mind to concentrate,
It helped when things was out of joint
To whittle deep and to a point.
At politics they'd argue
An' how the words and chips would fly,
An' you could tell where there had sat
Some notching, laughing Democrat.
Outnumbered, unequal strife,
But fightin' back with tongue and knife.

Rep'licans had heeded him.
In Washington I heard 'em say
Beneath the Whittlin' hid away,
They're countin' room all set apart
Devoted to the whittler's art.

Some President I knew
"Twix whittlin' straight and thinkin' rae,
I do not choose to give him name—
It's whittled deep in Halls of Fame.
Nowadays we take things on the run
An' do a thing—because it's done.
We never stop to calculate,
To reason or to hesitate.
Opinions, too, that's handed out,
We swallow down without a doubt.
I guess to me that it would pay
Sometimes to whittle a different way.

We believe that this may have been the first practical outcome of dehydrating foods; except so far as dried-apples and other fruits went. Nothing commercial ever was done with the process, for drying hulled corn. But believe me, dried hulled corn, with maple syrup is good food, hearty and tasteful. Hot from the skillet, it can't be beat.

OXFORD COUNTY UNITED PARISH

Carnival a Success—Church Service Well Attended

This past week end was one of marked success in the Parish activities. The winter carnival under the direction of the Crooked River Outing Club, was a success in many ways. The grade school competition was the greatest it has ever seen and the enthusiasm of children all ways is contagious. A good sized crowd was present to enjoy the activities and the hall was filled to overflowing in the evening.

Norway High School retained possession of the Payson cup. Alfred Cummings of Norway was Carnival King for the third successive year and obtained permanent possession of that cup. Rodney Grover of East Stoneham, who entered competition for the first time, finished the day by obtaining two cups. Norway won the grade school cup. Though the prizes were greatly reduced, the indications are that when all bills are paid, there will be a small balance in the treasury.

The church services, last Sunday, were especially encouraging with an unusually large attendance at all the regular services.

"There is No Place Like Home"

The Foundation and Salvation of Our Country Rests in the Home

Men look at the weakened structure of business in "our poor little rich country" and wonder what industry can supply the stimulus for recovery.

Perhaps if we turn our eyes away from brooding factories, stores and office buildings to the 30,000,000 homes of the nation, we shall find the answer to some of our problems "right in our own backyards." For America has travelled a curious circle away from home and back again during a single generation.

Not so long ago, when we said, "There's no place like home," we spoke and thought of the beauty, comfort and family ties of that dearest place on earth. Then came "prosperity"—and with it a gradual "flight from home."

Father, when he didn't "stay at the club," found himself returning more and more frequently to a household from which other members had flown. Almost imperceptibly the old familiar saying took on a new meaning. It became literally true—There was no place like home. The deeper significance of that word had disappeared from the consciousness of tens of thousands of families.

Then came depression. And now the circle of our wanderings is completed. Somewhat reluctantly at first—but with a growing feeling of relief, tranquility and enjoyment—the American family has come back home. Once more they are saying, "There's no place like home!" and genuinely meaning it. But—are they going to stay?

It is up to individual fathers and mothers on the one hand, and the great forces of the building industry on the other—to make American homes more livable—to realize that the home of 1900 will no longer suffice for the family of 1933—to modernize the home by installing some of the wonderful comforts of this new day. For our American homes are by no means as modern as we like to think.

Less than 22 per cent of rural and village homes, for example, have bathrooms—and, surprising as it may seem, only 68 per cent of city homes can boast this common necessity.

Approximately 85 per cent of homes in most communities are urgently in need of painting, decorating, repairing or alterations.

Less than 20 per cent of the wired homes of the United States enjoy the comfort and utility of iceless refrigeration.

The number of oil burners in use is even smaller, for less than 4 per cent of American homes are equipped with this modern type of heating.

As for that vital new development, Air Conditioning, scientifically-cooled homes in sweltering summer months are virtually unknown.

And yet, some say "Our American job is finished!" Who can doubt the almost universal desire for these improvements—or overlook the significance, from an economic standpoint, of the situation confronting us? In the hearts of our people the greatest revival of home interest is a generation! The most wonderful home comforts and luxuries of all time! And thirty million American homes waiting for them!

Here is opportunity—a direct challenge to the finest brains of industry—and a market holding rich rewards for those with the will and skill to supply the need.

The die-hard depressionists will ask, "Yes, but what are people going to use for money?" The answer is, America is facing depression—but America is not beggared. We have lost money—but we have not lost per capita wealth far beyond any other nation on earth—nor a payroll greater even today than all Europe combined—nor skilled man-power and industrial equipment unequalled anywhere in the world.

The real question is: Have we lost courage—initiative—ingenuity? And that is a question, not for the public, but for builders in every line. And salesmen. And advertising men, perhaps, most of all.

For the big task of the building industry today, and of all other industries seeking buyers, is to overcome apathy with Advertising. Advertising is equal to the task. It will improve the present and make great the future for those businesses which employ it wisely. But it must be good Advertising—burrowing deep into the consciousness of the people—soundly planned, ably prepared, well directed.

The words, "Let's get busy!" must supplant "What's the use?" as a national slogan—a policy of do something instead of a policy of do nothing—at least among those who hope to hold leadership tomorrow.

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 years old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore, I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast. It's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

Lindy Class 32; West Paris 22

A snappy game of basketball in the high school gym, Saturday afternoon, brought another victory to the Lindy Class in the defeat of West Paris 32-22. West Paris worked to the front during the early stages and at the half had the Lindy boys on a run to the tune of 12-5. Trading was what the Lindy made for greater effort and the second half was another story in which the teams went into a tie and Briggs dumped in a string of four baskets that carried the home outfit far beyond the reach of the visitors' long shots. The Lindy made 24 points to West Paris' 10, in the final half.

After the high school games are over, Elmore Edmunds' boys will plunge into their season as basketballers with a long series of games before baseball arrives.
